Advanced Web-based Business Solutions

What we do:

Our software engineers provide our customers the service of legacy site migration to our content management server while maintaining existing site functionality, and separating design from content.

During this process the customer is able to define the dynamic content and identify the rules for how it should be updated, furthering functionality, new technology incorporation, and future enhancement efforts.

What we have:

Our content management server is an XML-based software platform, with a built-in platform to manage sophisticated business logic programming code.

Our content manager design is based on the concept that a website design is separate from the content and business logic.

Our mature, stable product is provided by six years of R&D, and real world enterprise-wide mission critical application and service.

VIOMA is a hosted content management system built on top of an integrated content server that uses XML technology and integrated web services that can seamlessly work on virtually any media from any platform.

This technology provides a server side browser-based system for client review, collaboration, workflow and creative repository for any media in a secure private network, branded and tailored to the client company.

Content Management

VIOMA Content Management Server™

Content creation, and management is simple and enables non-technical people to quickly update necessary corporate communication.

Enterprise content management integration capacities allow VIOMA Content Management Server™ to successfully integrate with most legacy databases and CRM, ERP, and SCM enterprise applications to provide dynamic customer based content.

Business Logic

Business Logic Server Platform enables organizations to add an unlimited number of features and capabilities to their web presence. This business logic platform gives your organization the ability to automate processes and provides functionality enabling your website to perform complicated and sophisticated tasks.

Add nearly limitless capabilities to reduce the work load of your customers, prospects, close vendors, and employees. Also benefit your key business executives by providing them with timely and organized information for better business decision opportunities.

Integration

HeavyLift Development Solutions
